City of Greater Geraldton Mayor Shane Van Styn said it was an honour to host the 2020 Lester Prize.

"This is one of Australia's most recognised art prizes with over $100,000 in prize money and we are hosting it at GRAG for the next few weeks for all the Midwest to see," he said. "Many of the finalists were from Western Australia, which may be inspiring and heartening for our creative community".

Executive Director of The Lester Prize Annie Silberstein said "the 2020 Lester Prize reflects the year we found ourselves in 2020. Either directly facing or gently filtering the challenges and changes that impacted us all in 2020, we see in last year's Lester Prize a community of artists who are turning inwards—to their loungerooms and loved ones, their rituals and routines—to create a timely, deeply personal and powerfully poignant image of our shared human condition. We are very pleased to share with you, the national spirit represented within this exhibition".

The exhibition is collaboration between The Lester Prize and GRAG, and will be on display from Friday 2 July to Friday 6 August.

On Saturday 3 July, figurative artist Jill Ansell, and a former finalist in The Lester Prize will host a portrait art workshop where participants will learn about proportions of the face, how to check face measurements, tonal underpainting and colour mixing. Tickets are just $30 and the event goes from 12.45pm to 3.30pm at GRAG. Visit www.artgallery.cgg.wa.gov.au for more details.

Submissions for the 2021 Lester Prize are closing on 5 July 2021.
